Apple has been granted a patent. Is the Apple car coming soon?

Apple has been granted a patent from the US Patent and Trademark Office for a service that would store vehicle keys on an iPhone. "Apple's granted patent generally relates to wireless communication between computing devices and, more particularly, to using portable computing devices to access a vehicle," Patently Apple reports. The service would let users open their car doors, start the engine and shut it off for specific time periods and program personalized vehicle settings.

The village with no locks or doors

Shani Shingnapur in India's Maharashtra state, is a village where villagers eschew security because of their undying faith in Lord Shani, the god of Saturn, who is considered the guardian of the village.

This is all due to a 300 year old legend, of a heavy black slab of rock, washed up on the shores of the Panasnala River and the deity Shani appearing in the dreams of the village head, revealing that the slab was his own idol.

After the villagers installed the huge slab on a roofless platform in the heart of town, they decided to discard all doors and locks. They didn't need them anymore, not with the Lord to watch over them.

I guess this isn't a good town for a locksmith business. Read more here

Shani Shingnapur attracts about 40,000 devotees each day due to its remarkable 300-year-old legend.

Another Alternative For Homeowners

Special Real Estate Report

Twenty-year mortgages are making a comeback. As the economic recovery has progressed, more consumers are looking at ways to improve their long-term financial situation. The real estate boom of a decade ago was all about putting as little money down as possible and staying highly leveraged.

Today, Americans recognize the benefits of a home loan being a forced savings plan that builds up equity each month. That is why home loans with a 15-year schedule have been so popular in the past five years.

However, many cannot afford the higher payment of a 15-year loan. The 20-year mortgage provides a great alternative for those who can't qualify or afford a 15-year payment schedule.

The 20-year pays off the loan 10 years early, which is only five years less than a 15-year, but does not have as high a payment. Plus, some 20-year loans are priced less than 30-year alternatives and mortgage insurance costs may be reduced as well. It is no wonder this option is becoming more popular.
